Fresh Approaches to Challenging Behaviour and Relationships

4th July 2011

Are your usual approaches to managing behaviour not working with particular individuals? Then join us to think more deeply about why children behave as they do, how we can find strategies to bring about positive behaviour change and meet challenging emotional needs.

Including Children with Attachment Difficulties

15th September 2011

This is a practical 'non medical-model' session for front line Early Years and school based classroom practitioners working with children and young people with serious attachment issues arising from loss, trauma or abuse.

Drawing on the work of Louise Bomber, (2006) and our experience over many years as educational psychologists - we will explore together what the best practice in supporting this group of young people should look like. We will outline very practical strategies for use in mainsream classrooms and early years settings.

Including Children with Autism

13th October 2011

In this practical workshop session we will explore ways of including pupils who have been labelled as being on the autism spectrum. The session will be values based and practical. Parental perspectives and experiences will also be explored. This is not a 'medical model' session on autism. Our motto is 'People do things for a Reason (and the reason isn't autism).' We make full use of first hand accounts of the experience of autism - the autobiographies - to deepen participants' understanding of what it means to be labeled 'autistic'.

Person Centred Planning

17th November 2011

This course will provide participants with an introduction to person centred planning and approaches including examples of best practice in using person centred approaches in schools. The course will explore the underlying values of person centred approaches, provide an introduction to the person centred planning tools and link this to national policy and guidance.

Creating Circles of Friends

15th December 2011

Circle of Friends is an approach to enhancing the inclusion, in a mainstream setting, of any child or young person who is experiencing difficulties in school because of disability, personal crisis or because of their challenging behaviour towards others. The 'circle of friends' approach works by mobilising the young person's peers to provide support and engage in problem solving with the person in difficulty. This is an excellent opportunity to learn from Colin Newton and Derek Wilson the educational psychologists who brought this DfE endorsed approach to the UK.

Restorative Justice and Classroom Interventions

12th January 2012

A "Restorative Solution" is a non-adversarial approach to conflict resolution where the person who has done something wrong in a given situation becomes accountable to those s/he has harmed. This person is then given the opportunity to "make up" for their inappropriate behaviour through agreement and reparation. An intervention can involve a formal conference, or it can be a simple conversation on a corridor or playground. Restorative Interventions work with all ages of young people, and the techniques can be used in parental meetings, can prevent exclusions and challenge poor behaviour. This day's training will enable participants to facilitate Short Restorative Conferences, and will suggest ways of working with young people and others that will help to repair broken relationships, and challenge some difficult behaviour. Including all those affected by an incident in its resolution is a powerful way of producing significant improvements in behaviour.
